

Recruiting GPs, practice nurses and staff

We would like to know your views about implementing a dementia risk assessment tool into primary care settings

Researchers at NeuRA and UNSW are conducting a project aimed at exploring attitudes and opinions of clinicians and practice staff on the implementation of an online dementia risk assessment tool (CogDrisk) in primary care settings.

If you choose to participate, you will be invited to take part in a 1-hour focus group or semi-structured interview (to your preference).

Contact details:

Lizzy Adamson
Research Assistant
l.adamson@unsw.edu.au

If you meet the following criteria:

- Currently practicing as a fully registered primary care practitioner in Australia

OR

- Currently working in a primary care practice in Australia
- Willing to provide AHPRA registration number for verification of registration, if a practitioner
- Have access to the internet
- Proficient in English
- Willing to participate in an audio- and video-recorded online focus group or interview

Please get in touch to register your interest in taking part in this research.